

Schedule C

Schedule C includes positions of a confidential or policy-determining character, such as political appointments. They are handled on a case-by-case basis in situations for which appointees keep a confidential or policy-determining relationship with their supervisor and agency head, making a political appointment potentially appropriate.

The exception from the competitive service for each position listed in Schedule C by OPM is revoked immediately upon the position becoming vacant. An agency shall notify OPM within 3 working days after a Schedule C position has been vacated.

When requesting a Schedule C exception, the agency must certify in a signed statement by the agency head that the position was not created solely for detailing to the White House.
